27 February 2023 – 06 March 2023

Tech.eu Cate Lawrence, EN, March 5

Will EU blockchain investment and incoming EV battery passports finally commercialise blockchain mobility use cases?

Since the mid-2010s, blockchain pilots have looked to solve mobility challenges. While promising, none made it to market. But now, incoming battery regulations and EU blockchain technology investment offer a real opportunity for commercial use cases.

Drei Schritte auf dem Weg zur Datensouveränität

Geopolitische Verwerfungen und umgebaute Lieferketten haben das Thema Datensouveränität wieder auf die Tagesordnung gesetzt. Um dauerhaft die Hoheit und Kontrolle über die eigenen Daten zu behalten, bedarf es eines smarten Prozesses in drei Schritten.

Three steps on the way to data sovereignty

Geopolitical upheavals and transformed supply chains have put data sovereignty back on the agenda. In order to permanently retain sovereignty and control over one's own data, a smart three-step process is required.

Le cloud selon l'initiative franco-allemande Gaia-X, désormais une réalité

L'initiative franco-allemande Gaia-X, qui prône les valeurs européennes de transparence, d'interopérabilité, de portabilité des données ou d'ouverture aux standards, entre dans le concret. La section française, dont les travaux sont coordonnés par l'Institut Mines-Télécom, lance au début de cette année une plateforme en ligne où les fournisseurs décrivent leurs services cloud selon des critères communs définis par le consortium.

The cloud according to the Franco-German initiative Gaia-X, now a reality

The Franco-German Gaia-X initiative, which advocates the European values of transparency, interoperability, data portability or openness to standards, is getting down to business. The French section, whose work is coordinated by the Institut Mines-Télécom, is launching an online platform at the beginning of this year where providers describe their cloud services according to common criteria defined by the consortium.
